Conceptual Planners

THERE'S A WORLD OF

difference between planning a wedding and conceptualising a wedding that is impressionistic and personalised down to the smallest detail. This makes Hannah Chong of Heaven's Gift distinctive above the others – not just in Singapore, but in venues as far-flung as in Seychelles, Tokyo and Bali.

“We are concept designers and planners,” says Hannah. “We envision what the event will look like, how the mood will progress, and together with our in-house designers and partnered contractors, we create the event.” Hannah and her team cover everything from architectural sets to lighting, from floral look and feel to wedding stationery, favour packaging to even the intricate design of the wedding cake. “We have no standard template for a wedding,” Hannah shares, “Every couple is special, every experience is unique, just like what we always emphasise in our philosophy, ‘Your Story, Our Inspiration’. At the end of the day, every detail, every mood must reflect the personality and style of our couple besides the planner.”

What a concept designer brings to an event goes beyond pretty flowers. She and her in-house designers consistently research and plan, create ideas and drawings before assigning any final work to florists/contractors, turning even the plainest venue into a garden of earthly delights. Her team is extremely hands-on, every detail is thoroughly thought out, so nothing ever falls through the cracks. Not only will Hannah work with the pastry chef on the design of a cake, she is always there on site to supervise the actual day installations and decorations. In fact, there's very little, if anything at all that fazes the team at Heaven's Gift, not even off-the-map overseas weddings. They have worked around cultural and language differences, coped with import and customs officials, collaborated with contractors on details deployment, calmed anxious parents and families, while attending to the tiniest details that go into making an actual day wedding unique and perfect. Over the past 7 years, her couples and families have trusted her to create weddings that exude beauty and elegance, and ones that are also spontaneous and fun, she and her team have delivered them all.

“Beyond creative aesthetics, besides being beautiful, a wedding is a celebration of loved ones and friends,” concludes Hannah, “I always look forward to that moment when guests dance their hearts out on the dance floor, when guests can't stop talking about the chill-out corners and favours, and those intimate speeches that touch our souls. To me this is the true meaning of a wedding celebration.”
